IIAS EUROMENA 2022

Joint Conference on Next Generation Governance and Young Global Public Administration

Description of the Theme

The IIAS-EUROMENA 2022 Joint Conference will take place in Rome, on June 27-July 1. It is co-organized by:

- The International Institute of Administrative Sciences (IIAS);
- The University of Rome Tor Vergata;
- Luiss – Libera Università Internazionale degli Studi Sociali - Guido Carli (LUISS)
- Scuola Nazionale dell'Amministrazione (SNA);
- The Middle-East and North Africa Public Administration Research network (MENAPAR);
- ISCTE – Instituto Universitário de Lisboa;
- The European Group for Public Administration (EGPA).

The Joint Conference will focus on the theme Next Generation Governance and Young Global Public Administration: Mobilizing People, Skills, Energies for a Sustainable New Normal. This theme has three keywords: next generation, global, and new normal.

The next or young generation is the first keyword of this theme. Whether called millennials, digital natives, generation z… it is assumed that this generation is sufficiently different in terms of demands, values, behaviors, skills… to have a disruptive impact on public administration, governance and policies. For example, in the "Fridays for Future" movement led by a new generation, the climate actionhas been framed as a question of intergenerational -and developmental- equity, and generationaldifferences of style are striking: usual 'too little too late' approaches are not considered anymore as acceptable solutions to this and other issues. Such a new generation bases its relationships on digital-based platforms and devices.

Second keyword in this theme is global. There is an expectation that this new generation, concerned as it is by the global climate change and sustainable development challenges, and digitally involved in global communities of values, sees public governance as primarily global, only pragmatically sensitive to national or regional idiosyncrasies. The spread of global cosmopolitan values through digital means can't be denied: the dreams and fears, tastes and consumption behaviors of this new generation overlap geographical boundaries. The struggle has become global, is being performed on the Internet, but has certainly not disappeared and could be argued to be intensifying instead.

Third keyword is new normal. This reflects an assumption that the COVID-19 pandemic haslong-term disruptive consequences on our lives, which suggests:

- An increasing reliance on 4IR tools in our daily lives, including: videoconference, facial recognition, geo-localization, streaming services;
- Resilient organization of our lives, with alternating periods of office-working and isolation,possibilities of travel interrupted by lockdowns, variable social distancing…;
- Different macroeconomic policies, with an increasing money supply, sustained high debt levels of economic operators, high inflation levels, and a booming cryptocurrency exit market.

European Governance, Appropriate Administration for a New Public Normality and Challenges that Arise from the National Recovery Plans

Prof. Loredana Giani
Università Europea di Roma

Dott. Eduardo Ruiz Garcia
Manager INTOSAI Development Initiative

Notions of appropriate administration arise as a necessary measure of the new European programming and role of public administrations that will implement it. Appropriateness becomes the measure of the reforms and activities because it allows after-the-event control over the objectives and those achieved. European public governance and the related recovery plans drawn up in the version of long-term planning for missions call for reflection on a new, but not improvised way of understanding public power and its exercise. Mission co-ordination is a key element in enabling the plans to succeed in relation to previously unimaginable EU funding, representing an opportunity that should not be missed. The strategic objectives are diverse and relate to specific profiles, but they all need to be brought together systematically in order to avoid the failure of the plans overall. The purpose is to identify a shared notion of appropriateness as a guiding value for public agencies and civil servants.

The aim of this track is to provide a key to understanding what reforms are needed and what coordination and controls should be organized in order to avoid dispersion of the funds of the plan.

The panel is aimed at jurists, economists and political scientists.

Next Generation, Social Dimension and SAIs' Controls

Prof. Loredana Giani
Università Europea di Roma
loredana.giani@unier.it

Benjamin E. Jakob, MBA, CFE, CGAP
European Court of Auditors

The track aims to reflect on the role of Supreme Auditing Institutions (SAIs) with respect to the reforms implemented in the context of the Recovery and Resilience Facility (RRF), with reference both to expenditure and the coherence and systemization of the interventions. Controls, by their very nature, guarantee a cultural change in the approach to administrative and management activities to enhance the relationship between formal and substantial rationality and, therefore, the guarantee of the social dimension of the administrative function. If it is true that controls are based on the structure of those on Structural and European Investment (SIE) funds, it is also true that the nature of the RRF funds (performance-based), the fact that they are also aimed at bridging the gaps between territories, and the binding nature of the objectives, give the programming hitherto unknown characteristics that will affect the entire public finance framework of the Member States. In this context, it is necessary to reflect on the extent of the perimeter of the control of the national SAIs, not limited to financial profiles, intercepting assessments of appropriateness and, therefore, of economy, efficiency and effectiveness regarding the acquisition and use of RRF funds, as well as on their functions in the European Union control procedures.
